

Lower 3 Make a Keyboard Out of a Banana?

During Monday's Computer Science lesson, Lower 3 used BBC Microbit computers to create a keyboard using bananas, plums, oranges and apples!

The task showed them how the digital world of coding can be used to control the analogue world in which we live.

Once programmed, by hitting the fruit a small charge triggered the input pins of the Microbit and played a note. Some even managed to code a tune.

- Mrs Karen Titman -