

Stella geographers get creative!

We are always keen to ensure stretch and challenge of pupils in geography so, each week, optional extension activities are provided as part of homework activities.

These tasks are always engineered to tempt curious minds and cover a range of different skills such as independent research, solving puzzles or preparing a presentation for the class.

The latest challenge was one that played to those possessing more creative talents though! To extend the work on contour lines and relief covered in lessons, pupils received the opportunity to create their own island and produce a poster and/or model.

As you can see, we had some lovely submissions. Congratulations to Ella, Ruby and Eloise for your Stella work!
