

Transition write about their Polar Explorer topic

This half term our English work has all been linked to our humanities topic, 'Polar Explorers'. This week the children have been learning to use capital letters for the names of people and places. We learnt about all the fun things there are to do in the Arctic including seeing the Northern Lights, having a husky ride and seeing narwhals! The children then wrote some postcards as if they had visited the Arctic. We were so impressed to see the children remembering their capital letters and including exclamation marks and question marks. Keep up the super writing Transition!
