

Gracie completes EPQ presentation

This week, it was the turn of Gracie in Upper 6 to complete her Extended Project Qualification (EPQ) presentation.

These presentations are always an interesting element of students' projects as they offer insight into the choices behind their titles, and their interests beyond their A Level specifications.

Gracie's presentation was no exception as she explained the journey through her research into the pulse oximeter, covering its racial bias and whether it is still relevant in today's society.

Gracie has already written a 5000-word essay on this topic and is now at the final stages of her production log.

We wish her the very best as she completes her final components of this challenging, yet highly rewarding qualification.
