

Chat GPT for revision

Chat GPT has a poor reputation and many people will steer pupils away from it when it comes to academia. I however am a firm believer in using this tool for a range of purposes which can be highly beneficial for everyone.

Revision should be encouraged using a range of tools, this can be one of them. For example, asking it to write a high-level answer for a particular question a pupil is struggling with in a past paper can give a different viewpoint and resource for them. Many mark schemes for longer mark answers are vague and leave a lot open to interpretation for younger minds. This can show them exactly how to do it, provided they ask for exactly what you need. Example below:

E.g. Write a UK high level GCSE answer for the Computer Science paper 2 for the question: "Wearable devices, such as smartwatches and fitness trackers, have become more popular in recent years. This has led to an increase in the amount of personal, health-related data being collected by technology companies.

Discuss the:

- benefits of collecting personal, health-related data using wearable devices
- data privacy issues related to the collection of personal, health-related data
- legal issues related to the collection of personal, health-related data."

The response was brilliant for this and provided a great starting point for many pupils who had built up anxiety around revising longer mark questions, alleviating stress around it all.
