

Polar art in Transition

This half term in art, the children's artwork will focus on the polar regions of the world. This week we explored cold colours and investigated how to make a colour darker or lighter by adding black or white. The children were fascinated by this and were eager to create new shades. We challenged them to make at least 12 different shades of blue, which we will use in an Arctic themed piece of art next week.

We were impressed with their wonderful work and focus - well done Transition!
